GLOBAL MACRO DRIFT

The current macro-economic landscape reflects a significant systemic shift, driven by the Federal Reserve's pivot on interest rates. This development has triggered a rotation of institutional capital, with implications for global markets.

Metric	Observation	Alpha Impact
DXY Index	104.2 (Consolidating)	Bearish for EM FX

Metric	Observation	Alpha Impact
US 10Y Yield	4.25% (Yield Drift)	Tightening Credit Spreads
FII Inflow	$2.4B (Weekly)	Nifty Liquidity Support
Brent Crude	$82.5 (Stable)	Inflationary Moderation
India GDP	7.2% (Institutional)	Sovereign Premium Hike

The recent DXY volatility pivot has significant implications for emerging market (EM) currencies. As the Fed signals a potential end to the tightening cycle, institutional capital is rotating out of EM FX, leading to a bearish sentiment. This development is further exacerbated by the US 10Y yield drift, which is tightening credit spreads.

Global Macro Drift and Sentiment Mapping

The current global macro drift is characterized by a significant shift in sentiment, with fear and greed indices indicating extreme fear. This sentiment is correlated with Indian FPI/DII flows, which are experiencing a significant outflow. The rotation of institutional capital is driving this sentiment, with implications for global markets.

Multi-Asset Class Analysis

The multi-asset class analysis reveals a significant rotation in asset classes, with the US dollar/Indian rupee pair experiencing a 0.54% decline. Gold is experiencing a 2.64% increase, while Reliance Industries Limited and State Bank of India are experiencing declines of 4.60% and 3.88%, respectively. Adani Enterprises Limited is experiencing a decline of 3.37%.

Macro-Economic Analysis

The macro-economic analysis reveals a significant shift in the Indian economy, with a 7.2% institutional estimate for GDP growth. This development is driving a sovereign premium hike, with implications for global markets.
